Safe to say we could all do with a departure from reality right now; alas, fleeing to a remote island nation isn't exactly in the cards. But a well-planned road trip to get the hell out of Dodge could be just what your sanity ordered. We've rounded up some of our favorite weekend off-season getaways, with updated suggestions for the Neverending Pandemic Era. Just keep checking in on each state's regulations, as case rates continue to head in the wrong direction, and bring all your warmest duds (we're keeping you outside as much as possible).

Distance from Boston: Two hours

No Kripalu, no problem? Actually, it's a huge problem -- we hate seeing these iconic attractions closed down. But when you plan your Berkshires visits around high-profile venues, it's easy to forget about the region's simpler pleasures. The still-vibrant foliage, the hiking spots galore, and the chill vibes make for a restorative sojourn. The Cranwell has been reborn as the Wyndhurst Manor and Club —its massive grounds make it easy to stroll outside without fear of close contact, and the hotel is happy to set you up with a maple syrup tasting, among other late-fall pleasures. The Mount is the ideal spot to take a nature walk or forest hike (and experience more real estate envy). And the Pleasant Valley Wildlife Sanctuary will soothe your soul with the sites of wetlands and the sounds of birdsong.
